REPUBLICAN TICKET.

FOR PRESIDENT,
JAMES A. GARFIELD,
OF OHIO.

FOR VICE-PRESIDENT,
CHESTER A. ARTHUR,
OF NEW YORK.

Garfield will make a clean sweep of the Pacific States. In those States he stands next to Blaine in strength.

The county fairs of California will be financially successful this year. President Hayes leaves for that State next September.

We shall soon see how much of a twist the de jure President of the United States will have on the Cincinnati Convention.

When the Democrats kick so fiercely against a Republican nomination it is a good sign that they are put to their triumph.

Mr. Seymour's last declination was dated on Saturday. There is a chance for him to make several more before the first ballot is taken by the Democratic Convention.

The most important thing Garfield is responsible for is the remarkable unity in the Republican party since the Chicago convention. There has been nothing like it in the party for years.

If the Democrats had the least possible respect for decency, they would give Tilden the nomination. They should give the House of Representatives another chance to declare him elected.

Mr. Tilden will never be in a frame of mind to condone the Republican party for nominating Garfield. That event proved the political death warrant of Seward, and foreshadowed the defeat of the Democracy.

Here is the question in a nutshell: The questions to be settled at Cincinnati is whether the Democrats will make fools of themselves by taking a man they do not want, or make tools of themselves by taking somebody else.

The number of chartered lodges of Master Masons in this State is 178, which contain an aggregate membership of 11, 433. Taking into account those who have been raised and admitted, the increase over last year is only 613.

The reports thus far received from the various sections of the country by the Agricultural Bureau, show that the cotton crop will be seven percent larger in acreage than last year, that the acreage of spring wheat has been increased, and that all the crops are in an exceedingly promising condition.

Whatever weak points the Democrats may say Garfield has, it will be noticed that his nomination upset the entire Democratic programme regarding the Presidential question. He is strong enough to have drawn out all the mud-batteries of the opposition at once, to lay Tilden on the shelf, to make Seymour decline, and to make the Democratic nomination go a-begging.

Says the Milwaukee Sentinel: "An honest Democrat causes more trouble in his party than a hornet's nest at a picnic.
Here is Jerry Black swearing to Garfield's honesty, and shaming those who want to make political capital out of the perjured testimony of Oaks Ames. The worst construction that can be placed on the Credit Mobiler charge reduces it to a question of veracity between Ames and Garfield, and the former is known to have perjured himself on other points, besides contradicting him in the testimony against Garfield itself."

The Cincinnati Convention will be placed in a very awkward condition when it is called upon to decide as to whether it will deny the claim of Samuel J. Tilden to a renomination or give him another opportunity to run in the Presidential race. To the party as well as to Mr. Tilden, this is a question of deep concern. To persons outside the party the matter has a peculiar interest and humor about it, but to the managers of the Democratic party it is a grave question and demands sober thought.
Mr. Tilden claims, and the Democratic house of Representatives claimed in a resolution, that he is the de jure President. It he was rightfully elected in 1876, and was defrauded out of the office, why not appeal to the country in 1880, and demand that wrong shall be made right and Mr. Tilden vindicated? Is justice to him, if for no other reason, the Democratic should not hesitate a moment in giving him the nomination. But while Mr. Tilden considers himself the de jure President, and while the House decided he was rightfully elected, there is a powerful public prejudice against him which warns the Cincinnati Convention not to forget, and will not soon forget, the frauds which Mr. Tilden attempted to perpetrate in the winter of 1876-7. Then he sank lower in political villainy than any other man who ever entered American politics and claimed the suffrage of the people. The party then defended Mr. Tilden in his attempts to steal the Presidency. But it begins to betray its sincerity in believing Mr. Tilden innocent, by demanding that he must not be nominated. Confronted by a strong sentiment against him, the party begins to realize his dilemma. To nominate him will court defeat next November, and not to nominate him will be a confession that the charges the Republicans made against him and the party are true. The Cincinnati Convention can take any form of the dilemma it chooses.

The Democratic Ship at Sea Without a Pilot—Speculation Regarding the Candidates.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, June 20—"Things are decidedly mixed." That is the beginning and ending of almost every expression of opinion that has been uttered within in the past twenty-four hours. A few days ago the veriest tyro in politics in the country could name the Democratic ticket to a dead certainty. To-day the veterans of many conventions are forced to confess that the future is a sealed book and one written in an unknown tongue. It is now positively known that both Tilden and Seymour are out of the contest.

The New York delegation held a brief caucus last night at which Tilden's letter, the existence of which mention has already been made in these dispatches, was read.
It is just such a document as might be expected to emanate from the Gramercy Park philosopher, who withdraws his name, but practically leaves his interests in the hands of his friends. In other words he declined to enter into a scramble for the nomination, but the inference to be drawn from that he will take it if offered.
However, his case has long been a hopeless one, and his friends, appreciating the fact, will probably drop him and place their votes where they will do the most good.

Seymour has never been a candidate so far as any expression of his own is concerned, and within the past few days there have been received from him denunciations of the most positive character. The latest was contained in a letter to Dr. Miller, of Omaha, which came yesterday, in which Seymour said he was extremely annoyed at the positive use of his name in connection with the nomination when he was thinking less of the Presidency than of his death and funeral, and added that he would be compelled to choose between the White House and the grave, he would unhesitatingly select the latter.

knowing well that his record would have to be held up before the people during this campaign, and I guarantee that it will stand the test. [Cheers].

Since the convention I have carefully read again the official reports, and I know what you are talking about, when I say to you there is nothing there which any man need fear will prove indecent, much less dishonorable, on the part of Garfield. No man of deeds ever got through the world without slander. Paul was charged with heresy. The Saylor of the world was charged with treason. Washington was slandered, Lincoln libeled and vilified, but I think no less of them, and no thinkin' man does. I know that reading "I have studied and settled all these charges against Garfield at the time, they were made, and I know that the Democratic party might now turn upon them and fly back in their own faces. Notwithstanding these charges made in 1872-3, Ohio, which Garfield had already represented in the House, for ten years, reelected him afterward three successive times, and each time by an increased majority, and last winter he was elected their Senator under circumstances of which any man might well feel proud. Mr. Garfield lives in the little town of Mentor, outside of any of the great cities, which form the political centers. It is said that Ohio has more statesmen to the acre than any other State. [Laughter.] Plenty of men of ability, surrounded by wealth and influence, wanted the position. Did Garfield come home, or did he hire men to write him up in the newspapers? No, no! He remained at his post in Washington; his own little town of Mentor was powerless in the State, and yet so entrenched was he in the hearts of the people of that State, that without lifting a finger, he was almost unanimously chosen by his party and elected to the Senate. When I read that, my heart beat quicker, and my faith in man and in the Republican party grew stronger, that a man should be elected, who had not the impudence to press himself forward as the fittest man in all the State for the office of Senator. [Cheers.]

After his election the legislature invited him to come to Columbus. He went, and in a speech given there he said it was the first time that he had been in the Capital of his own State since he had left Columbus as a State Senator and enlisted in the army, eighteen years before. Think of it! So unambitious, so modest, as to keep away from this political center, where statesmen were made and unmade. Not once was he there to make political capital for himself. In the same speech there was another showing of the man, when he paid such a tribute to Senator Thurman. He said he never should forget how years ago, when some raised itself against his good name, Mr. Thurman, whose personal and party interest it was to undermine his reputation rose above them all, so far as to stand before the people of Ohio, and say that was nothing to taint the character of Mr. Garfield, and that this act of Mr. Thurman should always be remembered by him.

That was the verdict given by Thurman when it was against his own interest to give it, and yet we hear small men declaring that Garfield is a thief and a villain. When such declaimers as that of Thurman are on record, it is idle for Democrats to talk of injuring Mr. Garfield by these things;

[CONCLUDED TO-MORROW.]

The Young Man's First Stove-Pipe.

Yes, son, you are correct. The first time you wear a stove pipe hat, everybody looks at you. Not as you may vainly imagine, because you are the first young man who ever wore a stove pipe hat, but because it is apparent even to the old blind man who sits in the back pew, without any cushion in, away back under the gallery where the poor have the gospel preached to them, that it is the first time that you ever wore a hat of that description. Your old father clasps one on the back of his head, puts his hands into his pockets, holds up his head, and walks off down the aisle. In a gale of wind and never thinks of his hat. But you, son, will pull at the most graceful angle it can be posed, and you may go walking along both hands ready to fly at the hat at the slightest provocation of the ghastliest phantom of a puff of wind. You don't look comfortable, son. Your hat is always trying to come off; you rub it the wrong way when you brush the dust off it; when you carry it in your hand up the aisle, everybody smiles because you are the first hold it by the brim and let the crown tip graciously over your arm, and by the time you have hit three or four worshippers in the head with it, you change and turn it under your arm and try to carry it that way without touching it, and the first thing you do in that pose, you put a woman's eye out with your elbow. Then when you sit down you put the hat down on the floor, setting it on the brim; a fatal mistake. And then before the sermon is half through, you put your feet on it three times. But never mind; you have to learn some time. Only don't imagine that people never saw anything of the kind before, because they have. And finally, son, as you are five feet three inches tall, don't think that a hat three feet five inches in height improves your appearance, or makes you look taller. Because it doesn't. It may make you look as though you walked in a second-hand clothing store, but it doesn't make you look taller. By and by, when you have worn a high hat, two or three years, you will wear it so naturally that it will become you. But the first time—oh, my son, my son!

BRIEFLETS.

No frost.
The ice men are busy.
Shows are scarce this week.
Barnum's big show is to be here one week from to-morrow.
W. A. Barnum starts to-morrow for his home in Danbury, Conn.
Captain Harry Merrill is back from the military school at Fairbank.
Ward Williams arrived home from Fairbank Saturday, and seems well and hearty.
Miss Mae Dimock entertained a few of her young lady friends last Saturday evening.
The thermometer yesterday afternoon showed 95 degrees above in the shade. That looks like a thaw.
Mrs. H. S. Conger, and her daughter, Miss Lucy Conger, started to-day for the East for an extended trip.
Rufus Hollister started to-day for Cincinnati, to visit his brother, and take a peep at the Democratic doings.

To-morrow is the day set for St. Mary's church picnic. It will be a happy time, if the weather don't go back on it.
The Chicago mail again failed to come to time this morning. It seems as if we were to live last week over again.

A son of August Weidenhoff tumbled, yesterday, and broke both bones of one arm. He wasn't skating, either.
Arrangements have been perfected for a celebration of Kuhn's centennial at the Baptist church next Sunday evening.

The money order business at the post-office footed up well last week, the total being $2,792.23. The beauty of it all is it is a cash business.

Willie Hilt managed to break one of his fingers so badly Saturday afternoon, as to force the bone through the flesh. Dr. St. John fixed it up again.

A motion for a new trial in the case of Horns vs. the City of Janesville, has been argued before Judge Conger, who has taken it under advisement.

It is said that the Delavan Guards have decided to join in the arrangement for a military showing on the Fair grounds here on the coming Fourth.

A good many who would like to have a shower are afraid to have one, for when once the clouds spring a leak there seems to be no way to plug them up.

Prof. Foster, who gave a temperance address at the Congregational church last evening, was among the callers at the Gazette office Saturday afternoon.

S. Fred Selleck, of the Recorder, has gone to Davenport in response to a telegram stating that his brother was lying there at a hotel dangerously ill.

Miss Helen Burn started off on her summer vacation this morning. She is one of the most faithful teachers at the Institution for the Blind, and richly merits a rest.

This is the last week that Mrs. Caldwell will keep her plant room open, and having still on hand a due assortment of plants she will close them out at very low figures.

The digging of the new well in the Court house park commenced this morning. The site in the east end of the park and the work will be pushed right on to completion.

Congressman Charles G. Williams returned home this afternoon, and is most heartily welcomed back to Janesville by those whom he has represented so well in Washington.

Captain Smith, Lieutenant Glass, Thor Judd and Obe Lusk have gone to Geneva to-day to look over the ground to see how it will answer for a camping out place for the Battalion.

Dr. Judd and wife, of Edgerton, passed through the city to-day en route for the East, and will visit several prominent cities, including New York, Philadelphia and Washington.

Saturday night as J. Jones was going home from a dance up the river some fellow, who had a grudge against him, hurled a stone at him, which struck him on the head, knocked him down, but didn't kill him quite.

Dr. S. S. Judd returned Friday night from Chicago, where he has been attending the National Eclectic Medical Association. He says the banquet of which six hundred of the profession partook, was an immense affair.

It costs the average man about a dollar to interview Street Commissioner Crott now-a-days, as he has his poll tax receipt book with him all the time. It don't pay to try and dodge him though, for he can't be dodged, and all this year have got to pay up.

Last evening the congregation of St. Patrick's church met at Young America hall and made arrangements for holding a picnic at Wheeler's grove on July 5th, for the benefit of Father Doyle. The needed committees were appointed, and other plans laid for a rousing good time, including a dance at Young America hall in the evening.

Mr. Thomas Austin brought into our office to-day a sample of winter wheat from his farm in Lima. It stands five feet six inches, an enormous growth of straw, and yet the heads are full and nice. There is in the same piece of which this is a sample fifteen acres, and it looks as if it would go about forty bushels to the acre. It's wheat worth looking at.

Those who feel inclined to find fault with the way the census of Janesville is showing up, can find plenty of mourners to weep with in other cities. St. Louis, Peoria, and other places are kicking most lustily and are going to have the work done over again. Of course the second count will not be official, but it will soothe the wounded pride.

Charles E. Parker, of Niobrara, Neb., arrived home Saturday afternoon without announcing his coming, expecting to give his folk a pleasant surprise, but when he reached Milton he was in turn surprised to learn the reports concerning him which had reached home before him. He came home just the same, and denies the rumors in toto.

Will R. Whitnall, the inventor of the new music leaf turner, in which Ald. Burns is also interested, goes to Chicago to make preparations for pushing its manufacture. The device is an ingenious one, and when once started in the market will sell rapidly, as it saves all the annoyance of musicians having to stop playing to turn over the leaves.

James Raymond of Turtle, picked up near Hanover a pocket book, containing about $200 in money besides valuable papers, and an examination of the contents showed that it belonged to Orange Williams, he gladdened that gentleman and showed his own honesty by returning it promptly to the owner who had lost it. There are men in the world, despite what croakers say.

Mr. G. W. Hawes, and some of his friends are planning for an extended trip East, the start to be made in about two weeks. They will go from Chicago to Niagara Falls, then by boat to Montreal, then over the Vermont Central, and down the Hudson river by boat to New York. From there they will proceed to Washington, and on the back trip will take in Portland, and Quebec. It will be a happy party, and the trip will doubtless be a pleasant one.

Universally acknowledged the best, Astor House, New York.

TEMBERANCE TALK.

Last evening there was a goodly sized audience at the Congregational church to listen to Prof. George E. Foster who delivered a temperance address. He was closely listened to and showed himself a ready speaker, of evident enthusiasm in the temperance work. He handled more particularly that branch of the subject which related to liquor selling and endeavored to show that a man ought not to be allowed to sell intoxicants of any nature. He supposed a saloon keeper sitting in a chair in front of him, and with this personage of the imagination he held a conversation, and asked him five leading questions, which he answered himself in the negative. They were, whether liquor selling added any to the material wealth of a town, whether it met any legitimate physical want of man's nature, whether it increased the intellectual standing of a community, whether it increased the wages paid of the working classes, or whether it aided to the moral strength of society.

Many of the arguments used by him were old, and yet he presented them in a fresh and interesting manner, which held the attention of all his listeners.

POLICE COURT POINTS.

Thomas Welch, a boiler maker living near the gas house, was brought before the bar this morning, for having been before another bar so frequently as to muddle him. He was sentenced to five days imprisonment to sober off.

George Townshend raised a lively commotion on the street Saturday night, owing to too much strong drink. He was wild, and was thumping passers-by without regard to who was going to be nominated or who had been ratified. Officers Cutt, Drake and McGinley had all they could do to carry him to jail. His Cutt's cost, set down on Drake's new hat, scratched McGinley, and when landed in jail struck out at the Sheriff with a right clucher. This morning he felt less like fighting, and complacently received his sentence of $10 and costs and five days in jail.

Miss Patrick Joyce has been complained of for assaulting James Wool, while the latter was driving her gesso off to the pound.

A complaint was also lodged to-day against Max Piennig for selling liquor on Sunday. He pleaded guilty and was fined $15 and costs.

STRUCK OUT.

A gang of about twenty men, employed in building the new railroad to Afton, took work to day, and gave rise to a rumor that there was a strike. By conversation with these men, we learned that their cause of complaint was as follows: Last week they were hired by one of the professional employment bureaus in Chicago, to which they paid $2 each, the agreement being that the men should go to work for Shaw & McDavid, the contractors here, for $1.50 a day. They came here and after working four days and a half, found that the wages were only $1.25 a day. They refused to work longer unless they could have the amount agreed on in Chicago, but the contractors would not pay it, saying they had never authorized any one to offer any such wages. The contractors accordingly gave them due bills for the wages earned, payable on the 12th of July, the regular pay day, and the men quit. This afternoon they were trying to get their due bills shaved, in order to get money to get out of town.
